

NCCAA offers new legal subscription service member benefit

The North Carolina Community Action Association (NCCAA) has launched a new benefit to its lineup of member services.

Former Salisbury-Rowan Community Action Agency Executive Director Rocky Cabagnet, currently of Hill and Chandler, P.A., has developed a Community Services Block Grant (CSBG) Organizational Standards Compliance package to help CAAs meet three of the 58 standards that private, nonprofit CSBG entities must meet to ensure organizational capacity in financial and administrative areas as required by the issuance of IM 138 by the U.S Department of Health and Human Services, Administrative for Children and Families. Announced in January 2015, the standards require public CAAs to meet 50 measures across three thematic areas comprising nine categories.

CAAs will receive access to Rocky, an experienced nonprofit attorney who understands the community action and Head Start missions. The subscription package includes an agency bylaws review, board training tailored to North Carolina legal fiduciary duties, evaluation of personnel policies, and memos for amendments applicable to federal, state, or local regulations. Community action agencies will receive a 50% professional discount on the CSBG organizational standards services.

“NCCAA continuously seeks to provide value to our members,” said Sharon C. Goodson, NCCAA executive director. “This unique package provides our members with quality legal services, at a huge discount, by a subject-matter expert well versed in our work.”
